THE CLOSING EXERCISES HELD AT MASONIC HALL.

An Interesting Entertainment Given-St. Patrick's Boys' School-Butler Commencement

The programme of drama and opera given by the boys of St. John's School at the Masonic Hall last night, for the closing exercises of school, was a performance exceptionally well handled for lads of their age. The programme began with "Come Where the Lilies Bloom," by a quartet, followed by a cantata and recitations by boys of the primary grade. "The Blind Begger," an operetta in one act, in which the parts of Zachariah Morgan was taken by John O'Donnell and Mr. Buffles by Charles McCool, was cleverly carried out, and ended with the "Song of Marion's Men," a concert declamation, and "Topsy Turvy," an acting song. In this song the boys were stretched in a line across the front of the stage, their hands just visible above a screen of white and red, and at the end of each verse, would automatically reverse themselves, displaying as many pairs of heels to the audience as there had been heads. Then they would right themselves in a manner known only to those behind the scenes and continue

ST. PATRICK'S BOYS' SCHOOL.

Only One Graduate, but the Exercises Were Pleasing.

The closing exercises of St. Patrick's Boys' School took place last night at the hall on Dougherty street. The exercises consisted of a varied programme. The entertainment began with a drill by the St. Patrick's Zouaves, and in their bright hued uniforms they executed many difficult maneuvers. "A Scene in the Schoolroom" by the small boys was creditably rendered. A debate, "Are Civilized Nations Justified in Seizing Lands Belonging to Inferior Nabrought forth considerable laughter from the audience by the manner in which the speakers exploited their views to the chairman. A one-act farce. "The Manager's Troubles," was one of the best pieces of the evening's entertainment. Edward Moroney, a lad fourteen years of age, who took the part of a colored stage manager, acquitted imself very well. Following the entertainment, Right Rev. Bishop O'Donaghue made an address to the audience on the work of the school and complimented the work of the Brothers of the Sacred Heart, under whose charge the school is run. Eighteen young boys received silver medals for deportment and general conduct during the year. There was but one graduate, D. Curran, and he was given a diploma by the bishop. As Young Curran was leaving the stage he was showered with cut flowers by his scholmates. The award of premiums to the pupils will be held at the school this morning at 9 o'clock.

The arrest of James Sweeney last night at his home, 1226 Southeastern avenue, for alleged robbery of the home of Herman Kessener, 1128 Southeastern avenue, was accomplished amid great excitement. His mother interfered with the officers and all of the women in the house added to the excitement by screaming. Sweeney protested and declared he would not be taken from the house and it was finally found nea type of patriotism made prominent at a cessary to drag him out bodily through the

Yesterday afternoon the home of Kes was robbed of clothing, jewelry, razors, and valuable trinkets. Kessener learned when he went home that Sweeney had been seen by neighbors standing on the porch and also carrying things away from the house. He acted as if rightfully there and his presence in the place was not questioned. Kessener advised the detectives and Asch and Griffin were sent out on the case. On their way there they met the district patrolmen, Irish and Wheeler, and later Day Patrolman Mackessy joined Sweeney is only twenty years of age, but is large and strong, and it was with some difficulty that the five men overpowered him when he resisted. If he told any new stories their age can best be determined by the individual reader's perusal of the speech itself, which will be found in another part of the paper. But the speech was something more than a mere string of anecdotes. It abounded in forceful argument and scathing arraignment of Democratic politics. It outlined the achievements of the Republican party in the past and gave some very substantial reasons for intrusting it once more with a new lease of power. It paid a glowing tribute to the administration of Mr. McKinley and evened up with a eulogy of Governor Roosevelt which found a ready echo in the hearts no less than the judgment of the audience. The roll call produced 925 votes-one short, that of the candidate; he could not, of course, vote for himself. There was renewed cheering and a rush to shake Gov. Roosevelt's hand. For fully fifteen minutes he was kept busy receiving the congratulations of friends, and business during that time had to be suspended. There was some transaction of routine business, and then adjournment came in accordance with the programme of the political leaders to the hour and minute almost decided on yesterday without a hitch, without a break, without a single serious obstacle having blocked put to the test the ingenuity and resources ed to of the managers of the twelfth national

SCENES AND INCIDENTS.

Graphic Description of the Demor strations in the Convention Hall.

Associated Press Dispatch PHILADELPHIA, June 21.-President McKinley was unanimously renominated for President of the United States by Republican national convention at o'clock this afternoon, and an hour and ten minutes later Governor Theodore Roosevelt, of New York, was unanimously selected to stand beside him in the coming

The scenes attending the selections were tumultuous. Such unanimous demonstrations in honor of the nominees of a national convention have never been equaled, perhaps, in the history of politics in this country. It was a love feast, a jubilee, a ratification meeting. .

There was a fine setting for to-day's spectacular drama. Bright peonies at either end of the stage made two flaming bits of color. Over the vast multitude fans moved ceaselessly to and fro like the pinions of a cloud of alarmed gulls beating the air. There were no preliminaries. The wrangle expected over the question of reducing the representation in the South was averted by the withdrawal of ex-Senator Quay's

The great hall became still as Senator Lodge, standing before 15,000 eager faces. gavel in hand, announced that nominations for President of the United States were in order. The reading clerk advanced to the front of the platform. He was about to call the roll of States for the presentation of candidates. When Alabama was called, a thin, red whiskered delegate from that State arose and surrendered the first right to speak to Ohio. A flutter of handkerchiefs filled the air and a cheer went up from the delegates in the pit as Senator Foraker, of Ohio, the ideal of militant Republicanism, strode toward the platform. Foraker is a grand-looking man with something of the imperiousness of Blaine and the dash of a Rupert about him. air was surcharged with electricity as he mounted the steps, and when he turned about, standing there with gray eyes calmly sweeping the cheering thousands, the magnetic orator must have been conscious of his power to call up a storm that would sweep through the amphitheater. Below him about on either side were banked men and women almost frantically waving hats, handkerchiefs and pampas plumes. In full view of the convention he sto of the hall. With resonant, ringing voice and graceful gesture, Foraker stilled the noise. Even the pages and attendants crouched down as they gazed at the

HURRICANE FROM THE START. Senator Foraker began to call up the hurricane from the start. Whenever he raised his arms aloft the whistling of the gale ran round the hall. When he said the nomination had already been made, that Wolcott and Lodge and the platform had each in turn named his candidate, a great cheer went up. When he said his candidate was the first choice of every man who desired Republican success in November the roar was like the rush of a heavy sea through a rocky cavern. The orator was silenced by his own words. Then he began again, speaking as few men can. His audience was thrilled. They sat like men under a spell. He dropped a word here, a word there, like sparks upon a sun-dried stubble and when he concluded by placing McKinley in nomination, not on behalf of Ohio but of all the States and Territories, a ciap of thunder shook the building. Below him, all about him were deafening roars. The previous whistlings of the storm were but the rustlings of a summer night's breeze. For a moment the magician leaned over the platform as if to satisfy himself that his work was accomplished. Then, seeing that the effort had been successful he retired to the rear of the stage. The sight was a grand and inspiring one

In the pit the delegates and alternates were cheering enthusiastically. Over the acres of spectators bedlam reigned. The hall was an angry sea of tossing color. Flags, red, white and blue plumes, shot up as if by magic to crest the waves. Hats were lifted aloft on canes. Umbrellas were hoisted and twisted until they resembled the newspaper men, with watches out, were counting the minutes. On the stage Senator Hanna, his handkerchief in one hand a fan in the other, was spurring the vast assemblage to new endeavors. The raging did not seem to satisfy him. seized a plume and whirled it about his head like a general leading his men to the charge. All at once a delegate, bearing the standard of Kentucky, rushed forward to the stage. The effect was magical. Standards of the State were torn loose and yelling delegates climbed upon the platform to rally around their leader. With State guidons pointed to a common center they made a canopy over the head of the War wick of the Republican party. Ohio interlocked her staff with New York, Maine figuratively kissed her hand to Californi and Minnesota saluted Texas. HANNA AND A LITTLE GODDESS.

Then higher still climbed Hanna. He mounted a table, where he could look ou upon the cheering multitude. Beside h suddenly appeared a young girl arrayed the national colors. At this sight the cheers redoubled. The music of the orchestra was drowned in the awful din. The demonstration had now continued with scarcely a lull for ten minutes. Chairman the robberies, as was the one yesterday, Lodge began to rap for order, but the ring of his gavel was of no avail. A Texas delegate shouted above the roar, "Three cheers for Mark Hanna!" They were given with a

Then a delegate with Ohio's standard his hand dove down into the main aisle and went careening toward the rear, to the music of "John Brown's body lies moldering in the grave." The bearers of the standards of the other States plunged after him. Down the aisle they swung, starting the whole storm afresh. When they reached the main entrance they were met by men holding aloft a gigantic papier mache elephant, with the national colors entwined back and circled the pit. For several minutes this parade continued. The demonstration, all told, lasted exactly fifteen minutes. In length of time it does not compare with the prolonged cheer that went up for Grant in 1880 or Blaine in 1888 or for McKinley in 1896. It is also surpassed in length of time by demonstrations at Demo cratic conventions.

This protracted outburst was but forerunner of the pandemonium tha reigned a moment later, when Roosevelt the man of the hour, mounted the platform When the convention caught sight of h it went off again like a rocket. As 1 stood there facing the yelling multitude the roar could have been heard for blocks. tographer set up a rapid-fire camera di rectly in front of the hero of San Juan hill and began banging away at him. "Ted dy" looked about him while he waited for the storm to subside. Several tir raised his hand, but the cheering contin ued. His stern, square jaw was firmly set as he surveyed the scene. Only once did his face relax. That was when he caught sight of his wife, who sat in the reserved seats overhanging the pit on his right Then he smiled till his teeth showed, and Mrs. Roosevelt fluttered back her handkerchief. When finally he was allowed to be gin he plunged directly to the heart of subject in the impetuous way which the people so much admire.

LOOKED AND ACTED LIKE A HERO. Mr. Roosevelt's first statement was that he rose to second the nomination of President McKinley, who had faced more problems than any President since Lincoln. The convention got on its feet, and it was sev eral minutes before he could proceed. Ev ery movement and every word was characteristic of the man. He looked, spoke and acted like one giving direction to an army about to go into battle. And nothing would content him but to storm the heights as he did at Santiago. Roosevelt is no master of the foil. He prefers the broadsword, and, as he laid about him sledgehammer blows, the multitude went wild with delight. A Nebraska delegate shouted: "Hit 'em again!" He had manuscript of his speech in his hand, and referred to it occasionally, discarding page after page as he finished, until the platform at his feet was strewn with white sheets. When he reached his peroration, and, with a world of infinite scorn in his voice, asked if America was a weakling to shrink from the world work of the world powers, the whole pit echoed "No!" in chorus. When he concluded and resumed his seat in the New York delegation the other delegates rushed forward and surrounded him. Many embraced him, and it seemed for a moment as if they would lift him their shoulders.

Senator Thurston, the Demosthenes of the Senate, John W. Yerkes, an orator from the Blue Grass State, and Governor Mount, of Indiana, also seconded McKinley's nomination, but before the latter concluded the convention was impatient for a down. Then the roll of States was called. and delegation after delegation rose solid blocks and cast their votes for Mc-Kinley

At 2:14 the convention, which had done the unparalleled thing of nominating both the candidates for President and Vice President unanimously, adjourned. Governor Roosevelt drove from the convention hal with Mr. Odell, seated in the rear of an open landau. He lifted his broad-brimmed hat to the continuous salvos that greeted him as he passed through the densely packed streets like a conquering hero, fresh from new victories.

To-night the faces of McKinley and Roosevelt are on all the badges, and their names are on every lip.

ROOSEVELT CONGRATULATED.

Telegrams from the President to the Vice Presidential Nominee.

WASHINGTON, June 21 .- At 4 o'clock this afternoon the President sent the following congratulatory telegram to Governor Roosevelt, at Philadelphia:

"Your unanimous nomination is a high and deserved honor. I extend my heartiest congratulations." Although no definite time has been fixed for the notification committee to wait upon the President and formally notify him of his nomination, it is known that the President has indicated that it would be entirely satisfactory to him if the committee whirling dervishes. On the press platform | would visit him at Canton on July 12. He and Mrs. McKinley expect to leave here for Canton not later than July 1, and it is not improbable that they may leave in time to reach Canton on June 30. According to present plans they will remain there through the month of July. It is understood to be the President's purpose not to make any speeches during his absence from A large number of messages have been received by the President congratulating on his renomination. Most of these came from political and personal friends in the United States, although there were several from Europe and one from South America. Governor Roosevelt replied to President McKinley's telegram congratulating him on his nomination for the vice presidency, but the reply was not made The first serenade given the Presiden after his nomination came from the Business Men's League of his native city of Canton, many of whose members are passing through Washington on their way home from the Philadelphia convention. They arrived shortly after 8 o'clock to-night, and after dinner, accompanied by the Grand Army band of Canton, marched to the White House. They reached the mansion just about the time when the reception to the homeopathists was coming to a close and paid their respects to the President The latter received their congratulations cordially and gave each one of his fellow-There were no introductions, as the President knew practically every man in the league. There were no speeches, and after the President had retired upstairs the Grand Army band took a station in the conservatory and played popular airs for half an hour or more. Among those in the league were Maj. Harry Robertson, Maj. Charles R. Miller, Judge T. T. McCarthy, about its neck. Then the procession came Judge M. E. August, Postmaster Frease and Judge Austin Lynch.

ROOSEVELT IS SILENT.

He Declines to Discuss the Action of the Convention. PHILADELPHIA, June 21.-Governor

Roosevelt left the convention hall with General Greene and was driven to the private house at which Mrs. Roosevelt is a guest. He declined to be interviewed, saying: "I do not care to be quoted. I shall reserve what I may have to say for the committee appointed to inform me of my nomination." The Governor took luncheon with General Green and subsequently left for New York in company with several friends. NEW YORK, June 21.-Governor Roosevelt arrived in Jersey City at 8:20 o'clock to-night, and, taking a cab, was driven to the Union League Club in this city, where he will spend the night. To-morrow he will go to Oyster bay for a rest. He came over with B. B. Odell, Senator Depew, Gen. Francis Greene and Reuben L. Fox. He positively declined to talk about his nom

It was said to-night that Governor Roosevelt might, in view of his candidacy, consider it necessary to resign the governorship and allow Mr. Woodruff to succeed him. Governor Roosevelt said he had given the thing a single thought as yet. he should resign it would put Mr. Woodruff in such a position that he would be the logical candidate for Governor.

ORDEAL OF THE BRIDAL COUPLE. An Unembarrassed Young Man Astonishes Some Passengers.

New York Sun. The bridal couple boarded the train at Suspension Bridge. He was a smoothfaced, well-set-up young man, and she was a sweet, pretty girl of a bride. There was a large, very hilarious company of wedding guests to see them off, and as the pair struggled from their carriage to the sleeping car they were almost lost to view in howers of rice and flying old shoes. Even this demonstration was not considered adequate, and a dozen or so young men followed them to their seats and poured streams of rice over them and down their backs until the train pulled out, while the crowd on the platform howled joyfully. The young couple stood the ordeal with great courage, and after the train had started did so well that before long the rest of the passengers in the car left off watching them and began turning in. The next morning the interest in them grew again, while section after section of the car was made up until the bridal couple's section stood alone, with its curtains still drawn. This was the state of things at 8 o'clock, and at 8:30 there had been no change. Nine and a quarter past came round, and still there was no sign of life from the bridal section. When, shortly half past 9, a slight, mysterious movement was apparent behind the curtains almost a sigh of relief went up from the rest of the car. The movement continued, increased, ur til suddenly, after an especially violent agitation of the curtains, they parted sufficiently to let a young man slip between them into the aisle. His hair was rumple and his coat collar turned up, and he carried a traveling bag and various articles of free for the men. In all golf clubs there wearing apparel to be donned in the wash room. As the young man hurried forward he seemed somewhat puzzled by the almost smiling interest of the rest of the car, but of embarrassment he showed not

When he had disappeared the car settled itself to await the egress of the bride. But if she was about to make her appearance she showed no signs of it. Neither sound nor motion was discernible from the recesses behind the curtains. In a little while the young man came back showing the freshened effect of cold water and hair brushes, and moved the bottom of the curciently to shove his under the berth. As he rose to his gain, the car saw that he was down reflectively at the cargo of rice which | the credit for an admirable Sunday covered the floor. He continued to regard abstinence.

it for some time, fixedly. Then he raised his eyes and surveyed the car. There was more or less unsuppressed smile on every face, but the young man still showed no embarrassment. His eyes traveled down one side and back the other, and they were Then he arranged the folds of the heavy curtains with elaborate solicitude, and finally went forward again and whi something to the porter. The car, to a paid double fare to have heard those halflozen whispered words. The pretty mysery was assuming proportions. But the porter only said: "Yes, suh." And then the oung man went over and sat down gravely in an end seat, from where he looked mack into the face of every soul in the

By this time it was no longer interest that moved the inmates of the car; it was palpitation of the heart. The air was crisp ith expectation. It seemed certain the bride must now make her appearance. down the aisle toward the bridal section He was a fat and very black porter. For an instant he paused before the silent curtains. Then a thrill of horror ran through the car, and several men got half way to their feet. With two swift movements h had pulled the curtains wide apart and thumping and pulling at something within! Another instant and horror has given way to amazement, for the inside of the berth immediately became visible to all who cared to see. The porter was making up the section. The bride had vanished! The car turned swiftly to the hapless bridegroom on the front seat. An expression of Arcadian simplicity rested on his countenance.

A few moments later the porter started toward his linen closet, but half way down the aisle he was held up by half a dozen male passengers with wonder-stricken "What has become of the bride?" they The porter scratched his head and looked Ethics of Sunday Golf.

New York Evening Sun. Very few women golf on Sunday. The reason most of them don't is not because of any religious scruples, however. because they believe in leaving the day is a kind of unwritten law, certainly a tacit understanding, that upon the one day when men are free to golf, women who may golf at any time should keep clear of the links altogether. Of course, women who forego the game disapprove playing it on Sunday, but the most radical forego it, too, and their reason is-so that the men may have a free observance would be approved by the churches that are such sticklers for rigid observance is uncertain. While they must be gratified at the paucity of the Sabbath links the fact that this is to encourage men to play there can be scarceconsoling. Still, among those who don
